This book reports on three rock art sites that contain some of the most spectacular rock art in the Columbia Plateau. There are more than 400 images that include several spirit figures and the westernmost Biographic rock art yet discovered. Owl Cave contains the deepest dark zone (cave with no natural light) rock art in the region, and is one of very few dark zone rock art sites in western North America.

In addition to describing the sites and motifs, the report discusses the function, age, and cultural relationships of the rock art. It contains 116 pages and 87 figures that illustrate rock art from these sites and comparable images from across the western US. Price: $15 plus $4 S&H.
